

The David Hill Trio Biography

“From the local church, for the local church”, is a statement that describes The David Hill Trio. During a time when some consider it to be “out of style” and “offensive” to share the message of the cross, the blood and repentance, emerges a group that does just that. Unashamedly, The David Hill Trio stands on platforms wherever they are invited and sing songs that point to the Lord Jesus Christ. This passion for ministry comes from each member’s relationship with their Savior and out of their relationship with their local church, the Miles Road Baptist Church in Summerville, South Carolina.

Singing lead/tenor for the trio is David Hill. Certainly no stranger to gospel music, this former pastor has sung with groups like The Gold City Quartet, The Nelons, and The Perrys. David brings experienced leadership to the trio along with the ability to take audiences from tears to laughter. Amanda Hill, David’s wife, sings the soprano for the trio. This talented young lady has filled in with The Perrys and The Nelons. Her crystal clear soprano voice and her ability to communicate a song make her a favorite among gospel music lovers. Singing the alto for the group is Stephanie Lindsey. This “preacher’s kid” attended Liberty University and sang with their traveling choral group. Her powerful voice and infectious personality make her a great fit for The David Hill Trio.

“What you see, hear, and experience from them on the platform is exactly what they are off the stage. Having been associated with pastors, evangelists, and singers for nineteen years, I sadly say there is hypocrisy in the ranks, but I can gladly say you will not find it in David, Amanda, or Stephanie”, shares Dr. Jim Palmer, the trio’s pastor. Strong vocals, tight harmonies, and songs with substance are things that the David Hill Trio possess. Take those qualities and combine them with compassion, conviction, a love to worship, and a passion to minister and then you will understand why it has been said that the David Hill Trio is “from the local church, for the local church”.
